At the heart of the story is Nick Evers, a recent MBA graduate and a bit of a playboy, and Elizabeth Bach, an independent and successful partner at his father's company. Nick is unexpectedly struck by a deep attraction to Elizabeth, who is significantly older. This leads him to follow her to Spain, where their intense and complicated romance begins, challenging both their hearts and careers. James Walter Lee's novel is a relatable and emotional journey of an unconventional love story.

Lee offers insight into the story's inception, drawing inspiration from Charles Webb's novel The Graduate, but with a twist where the young male protagonist falls for the older woman who, in Lee's novel, is an associate of his father's, and whom his father secretly desires.

"Kilometro Cero" is quickly establishing itself as a standout in the realm of contemporary romance with readers applauding its bold approach to “taboo” relationships and the immersive journey into the complexities of love and desire. The wave of positive feedback from readers highlights its impact:

- “A tormented love affair against the vibrant backdrop of Spain. A recent MBA graduate, Nick Evers finds himself entangled in a passion-fueled journey when he meets Elizabeth Bach, his father’s captivating colleague. As their illicit relationship ignites, Nick’s life spirals into a whirlwind of hedonistic pursuits and fleeting engagements. However, true love remains elusive, pushing Nick to confront the depths of his emotions. Amidst the intense romantic entanglements and Spanish allure, the tale explores the complexities of age, desire, and the sacrifices one must make for love.”—Literary Titan
