Healthcare practitioners typically utilize a referral management system to track patient referral data during their treatment in settings like hospitals and clinics. The main emphasis is on improving communication amongst the many healthcare workers involved in patient care. It helps with claim processing and revenue cycle management for the patient. Referral management is the process by which a patient is sent to another specialist or consultant by their primary care physician or current physician. This happens when a diagnosis is altered or a particular issue shows up that calls for a specialist rather than a general practitioner to manage it. In other words, the tracking of patient referrals across the care continuum can be done with the use of a referral management system. The main goal of the referral management system is to improve and streamline interactions between specialists, primary care doctors, and other healthcare professionals. As a result, there are many opportunities for growth due to the advantages of referral management solutions.
