"Every worker, no matter what industry, is entitled by law to the correct payment of wages, including overtime," remarked Chris Q. Davis, Managing Partner. "This case alleges the non-payment of required overtime pursuant to New York Labor Law."

Here is background on this litigation. Pedro Rodriguez, represented by The Law Office of Christopher Q. Davis, PLLC, has filed a collective and class action lawsuit in the US District Court, Eastern District of New York, against Inter-Con Security Systems, Inc. The action alleges violations of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) and New York Labor Law (NYLL) related to non-exempt hourly Airport Security Agents (ASAs) and Lead Airport Security Agents (LASAs) at John F. Kennedy International Airport (JFK).

Plaintiffs claim that Inter-Con denied them gap time compensation and overtime pay by requiring them to work "off-the-clock" after their scheduled hours and failing to provide accurate wage statements. Pedro Rodriguez serves as the Lead Plaintiff, and Inter-Con is identified as the defendant. The complaint asserts that Inter-Con qualifies as an employer under both FLSA and NYLL and controlled the work performed by the plaintiffs. Additionally, it mentions that Inter-Con's gross business volume meets the statutory threshold for FLSA coverage.
