

From the Deserts of Baja to Glitz in Hollywood: "A Finger of Land on an Old Man's Hand" is Ready for the Silver Screen

Earl Vincent de Berge's real-life adventure, filled with trials, triumphs, and profound insights, is set to make its mark on the silver screen.

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, December 20, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The mesmerizing landscapes of Baja Peninsula, the trials of four young men, and the poetic reflections of their journey are about to get the Hollywood treatment. Kew Media has acquired the film marketing rights to "A Finger of Land on an Old Man's Hand," a memoir by the renowned writer and poet, Earl Vincent de Berge.

At its heart, "A Finger of Land on an Old Man's Hand" is a testament to the transformative power of nature, adventure, and introspection. It's not just about the physical journey through the rugged terrains of Baja but also a deep exploration of the human spirit, resilience, and the quest for understanding. The book encapsulates the essence of discovery - both of the external world and the inner self. It serves as a reminder that amidst the challenges and adversities, there lies an opportunity for growth, understanding, and a deeper appreciation for life and nature.

"The desert's calm beauty teaches me that, if we seek heaven on Earth, we had better preserve the environment."

Set in the summer of 1962, this memoir chronicles the adventures of four young men, their encounters with the raw beauty of Baja, the challenges of survival in extreme heat, and the philosophical musings that arise when confronted with nature's vastness. The narrative beautifully intertwines the thrill of adventure with profound reflections, urging readers and future viewers to appreciate the beauty of the environment and recognize the importance of preserving it.

Earl Vincent de Berge, an Arizona native, has masterfully woven his experiences, logbook entries, and poetic prowess into this memoir. His deep connection with the Sonoran deserts of Central Arizona and his subsequent adventures in Baja have given birth to a narrative that's both thrilling and thought-provoking. De Berge's writing is characterized by its crispness, attention to detail, and a penchant for truth and empathy. Influenced by literary giants like Li Po, Robert Service, Steinbeck, and Mahfouz, his narrative style is both engaging and insightful. "Writing has become an obsession for me," admits de Berge.

Kew Media, recognizing the cinematic potential of this rich tapestry of adventure, introspection, and camaraderie, is now spearheading the screenplay's journey to the big screen. The film adaptation promises to be a visual and emotional treat, capturing the essence of the Baja Peninsula, the transformative journey of its travelers, and the profound lessons they gleaned from their expedition.

A Finger of Land on an Old Man's Hand, stands out for its high-spirited antics, philosophical introspection and richly sculpted prose.”

Independent Book Review - a prominent book reviewing firm

With four more books in the pipeline, including a biographical story and light-hearted desert animal tales for young readers, de Berge's literary journey is far from over. But for now, the focus is on "A Finger of Land on an Old Man's Hand" and its impending cinematic adaptation.

In the words of Independent Book Review, a prominent book reviewing firm, "A riveting journey into isolated villages, desert landscapes, and the dreams of four young men, A Finger of Land on an Old Man's Hand, stands out for its high-spirited antics, philosophical introspection and richly sculpted prose."

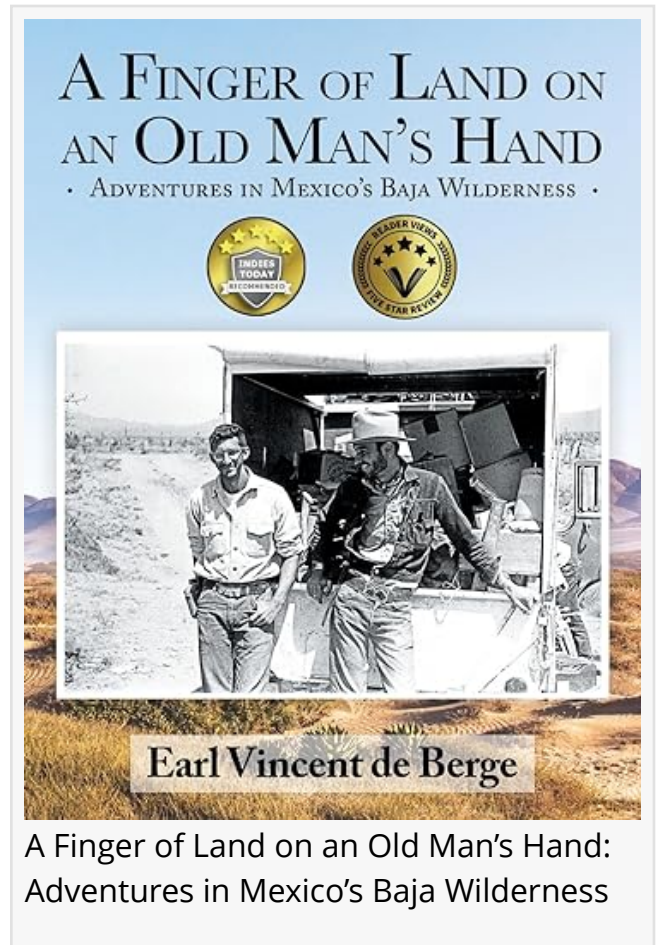

A writer, photographer, poet, and political scientist, Earl Vincent de Berge has left an indelible mark in various fields. His deep-rooted connection with nature, especially the deserts of Arizona, has been a driving force behind his writings. His recent publications, including "A Finger of Land on an Old Man's Hand" and collections of poems "Allegro to Life," "Swans to Carry Me," and "Wind in the Elephant Tree," reflect his profound insights into human nature, the environment, and the intricacies of life. Earl's commitment to making a difference is evident in his nonprofit initiative, Seeds for a Future, which provides home food garden training that has enabled thousands of families to fight malnutrition among mothers and their children.
