Dubai's Happiness Agenda aims to create a society that prioritises the happiness and wellbeing of its residents and IHateCleaning.ae is fully aligned with this vision. “We want to play our part in making Dubai the happiest city on the planet,” says Managing Director Ljubica Dordevic. She continued: “Clean and well organised spaces have a direct impact on mental and emotional wellbeing, and IHateCleaning.ae understands the significance of fostering a happy and thriving community.”

Whether it's a pristine home or an immaculate workspace, the professional teams at IHateCleaning.ae ensure that residents can prosper in an environment that supports their wellbeing and happiness. From apartments and villas, to restaurants, gyms, clinics, showrooms, and offices, IHateCleaning.ae seeks to minimise the stress associated with cleaning and tidying chores, allowing people to focus on other activities that bring them joy and fulfilment. “We help to maintain spaces that are not only squeaky clean, but also foster a sense of tranquillity and happiness,” says the German-trained MD.

The team members are all considered virtual partners in the business and strive to provide exceptional cleaning results combined with personalised service. App-based checklists on their smartphones ensure that each co-worker always knows where to go and what to do.

As far as possible, the company avoids any kind of toxic cleaning material. “We clean most surfaces with plant-based products derived from ingredients like coconut oil and grapefruit seeds,” concludes Ljubica.
