

CruiseAlly Sets Sail to Revolutionize Cruise Booking

CruiseAlly, a travel tech startup, announces its launch into the cruise space and aims to transform how people book and research their cruise vacations.

BLOOMINGTON, INDIANA, UNITED STATES, July 10, 2024

/EINPresswire.com/ -- CruiseAlly is excited to announce its launch into the cruise industry.

CruiseAlly, a travel tech startup, aims to dramatically simplify the cruise booking experience. Founded by passionate cruisers, CruiseAlly puts vacationers in control by offering personalized, data-driven recommendations and resources informed by the latest market trends.

After years of meticulous planning and thorough research, CruiseAlly is excited to embark on this journey to redefine the cruise booking experience.”

Founder, Justin Tait

CruiseAlly's industry-first features focus on users' vacation needs rather than price alone. Starting with the user's unique purpose, CruiseAlly provides vacationers a curated selection of cruise options and significant time savings.

Additionally, CruiseAlly addresses various pain points throughout the booking process offering solutions for experienced cruisers, new-to-cruise vacationers, and the cruise-hesitant. As a result, CruiseAlly customers can book their cruise with confidence.

With strong market knowledge and data-driven insights, CruiseAlly aims to uplift the entire cruise industry, empowering both vacationers and Travel Advisors alike.

CruiseAlly found the existing cruise booking process frequently overwhelms vacationers as they are confronted with a rapidly changing market, over a dozen major cruise lines, and over 20,000 available sailings at any given time. Far too often, this results in vacationers choosing a non-cruise vacation or settling on a less than ideal cruise based on insufficient data. Simply put,

CruiseAlly aims to change this dynamic by enabling vacationers to cut through the noise on their own terms.
