EINPresswire.com/ -- In the dynamic field of aviation, comprehensive training for maintenance personnel is essential. These professionals require qualifications, competency, and up-to-date knowledge and skills. EASA-compliant training programs are integral to meeting these needs.

This training typically covers the basics of EASA regulations, safety procedures, quality systems, and technical aspects related to aircraft maintenance.

Including:

EASA Part 145 Human Factors and Safety Management Systems \(HF&SMS\)

EASA Part 145 Fuel Tank Safety (FTS)

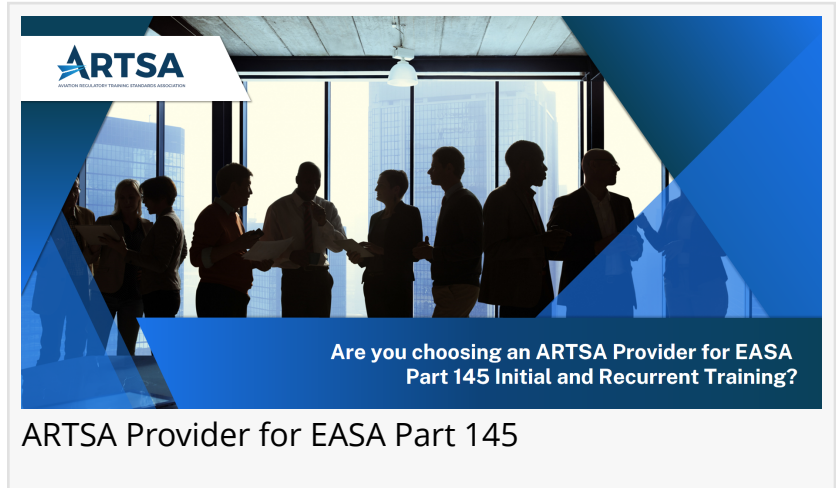

EASA Part 145 Electrical Wiring Interconnect Systems (EWIS)

Compliance with these training requirements is mandatory for organizations that wish to obtain or retain their EASA Part 145 certification, enabling them to perform maintenance tasks on aircraft registered in EASA member states.
