To claim moving expenses, taxpayers must meet certain requirements, such as the distance test and the time test. The distance test requires that the new workplace must be at least 50 miles farther from the taxpayer's former home than the old workplace was.

The time test requires that the taxpayer work full-time for at least 39 weeks during the first 12 months after arriving in the general area of the new workplace.

The IRS reminds taxpayers that they must keep adequate records to support their deduction and should retain all receipts and documentation related to their moving expenses.

The records should include the cost of packing, shipping, and insuring household goods and personal effects, as well as the expenses incurred for travel and lodging.
