Spring: As the weather warms, it's vital to inspect your home for winter damage. Sunset Home Improvement Inc. recommends checking your roof for missing shingles and ensuring that gutters and downspouts are clear of debris. This is also an excellent time to clean and inspect windows and siding for cracks or wear.

Summer: High temperatures and humidity can take a toll on your home. The experts at Sunset Home Improvement Inc. suggest ensuring proper attic ventilation to prevent heat buildup, which can extend the life of your roof. Inspecting and sealing windows and doors will keep your home cool and energy-efficient.

Fall: Preparing for colder weather is crucial. Homeowners should check for drafts and seal gaps around windows and doors. It's also the time to inspect the siding for any damage and ensure that the roof is in good condition to withstand potential snow and ice.

Winter: During the colder months, it's important to prevent ice dams by keeping the attic well insulated and ventilated. Checking window seals and siding integrity can also prevent heat loss and keep energy bills low.
