It adds, "the Task Force will explore applicable options of how Congress and the federal government can improve the fiscal state of the nation, examine how taxpayer dollars are being spent, and expose waste, fraud, and abuse."

GRC ensures organizations are acting responsibly and are transparent in decision-making processes and spending management. They are held accountable to the budget committee and

"The Bureau of Land Management Wild Horse and Burro program needs careful public examination, transparency, clarity, and a higher standard of GRC. Technology is available to ensure proper oversight of government decision making and spending within the program. Implementation of GRC standards pushes regulation within archaic and outdated environments. Data and science-based decision processes can be leveraged to use taxpayer dollars in a more efficient and effective manner.”

A growing number of people across the country support keeping wild equine on their designated federal lands. This is the low cost option. The budget chart shows how federal funds are currently primarily used to remove and house these equine in federal holding facilities or private short and long-term pastures. The chart reveals that most federal funds allocated to the WHB program are not used for herd management and planning or humane population oversight. Funds spent for these purposes amount to only 0% - 2% of the total allotment.
