St. Matthews school gets electricity and computer lab for the first time in its history.

This grand opening is more than just the unveiling of a new facility. It is a celebration of hope, transformation, and the inspiring journey of our young apprentices. These remarkable individuals have risen from a life without electricity to become harbingers of change in their communities, harnessing the power of solar energy to make a real difference.

Our apprentices are not just learning to install solar panels; they are lighting up schools, powering essential equipment in clinics and hospitals, and bringing sustainable energy solutions to areas that need them most. Their work is a tribute to the lives and legacies of Walt Ratterman and Dr. Bjoern Seipel, whose vision and dedication have been instrumental in this project.
