Taxpayers should also keep in mind any changes in tax laws that may affect their tax returns. In 2024, the standard deduction for single filers will be $13,850, and for married couples filing jointly, it will be $27,700.

Taxpayers who are eligible for tax credits should also take note of any changes in 2024. The child tax credit will be $2,000 per child. The earned income tax credit will also increase for taxpayers with three or more children.

Taxpayers should also be aware of any changes in state tax laws that may affect their returns. Some states have different deadlines for filing state taxes, and some states have different tax laws than the federal government. Taxpayers should consult with a tax professional or their state's tax agency for more information.

In conclusion, taxpayers should start preparing for tax season as early as possible. By staying informed about when to file their taxes and what documents they need, they can avoid any penalties or delays in receiving their refunds.
