

New IRS Guidelines for Filing Taxes With No Income But Have Dependents in 2024 Announced by Harbor Financial

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has recently released new guidelines for taxpayers who have no income but have dependents in 2024.

TRAVERSE CITY, MI, US, January 1, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has recently released new guidelines for taxpayers who have no income but have dependents in 2024.

These guidelines provide clarity on how to file taxes in such a situation and ensure that eligible taxpayers receive the full benefits they are entitled to.

According to the new guidelines, taxpayers who have no income but have a dependent can still file a tax return to claim certain tax credits, such as the Child Tax Credit.

Another tax credit for low or no income is the Earned Income Tax Credit. The EITC credit can provide significant financial relief to those who qualify,

It is important to note that even if a taxpayer has no income, they must still file a tax return if they have a dependent and wish to claim tax credits. Failure to do so could result in a loss of benefits.

These new guidelines are particularly relevant for individuals who have recently lost their jobs or experienced a reduction in income due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Many individuals who were previously employed may now find themselves without income but still supporting dependents.

To ensure that taxpayers receive the full benefits they are entitled to, the IRS recommends using electronic tax filing, which provides free tax preparation software to eligible individuals. Additionally, the IRS provides resources and assistance to help individuals navigate the tax filing process.

In light of these new guidelines, it is important for persons who have no income but have dependents in 2024 to be aware of their options and obligations when filing taxes. Filing a tax return can help ensure that they receive the full benefits they are entitled to.
