Recent Developments:

19 June 2023 – Airbnb partnered with the Ministry in its vision to promote inbound tourism as a part of its Visit India 2023 initiative. Under the MoU, Airbnb will launch a dedicated 'Soul of India' microsite for the global audience showcasing India's rich culture and built heritage.

30 May 2022 – Marriott International has signed a partnership agreement with Ant Group to enhance its digital operations in the Chinese market by providing Alipay members with various benefits when they sign up for the Marriott Bonvoy Rewards Program, Marriott's signature loyalty program. Marriott International will deliver more membership benefits with upgrades on products and services to further improve the consumer experience under its strong brand portfolio.

Regional Analysis:

The region-wise coverage of the market is mentioned in the report, mainly focusing on the regions:

By 2022, Asia Pacific is expected to have the most market share, at 35%. A significant portion of the outbound passenger market from the Asia-Pacific region may be attributed to the increasing number of millennials, who are further supported by growing disposable income and expanding infrastructure. International tourism in the region has been boosted by strong economic growth in an area home to more than half of the world's population, as well as by improved air connectivity, tourism promotion, and significant infrastructural projects. An increase in government funding for the upkeep and development of the area's current ecotourism attractions will also draw a sizable number of visitors.

Due to people's growing interest in animal tourism, natural environment tourism, and other topics, ecotourism has expanded dramatically throughout North America in the last several years. The increase in popularity of travel vloggers on social media sites like YouTube, Instagram, and others has drawn a lot more travelers, which has further accelerated the expansion of the local market. Additionally, government organizations in the United States are investing more time and money in cooperative initiatives and are actively involved in creating, organizing, and managing ecotourism operations. Therefore, the expansion of the regional market will be further fueled by an increase in government programmer to encourage eco-friendly tourism and a high level of interest in travel. South America and the Middle East have observed an increase in tourist footfall in the last couple of years. Countries, such as the UAE have a rich natural environment that offers a unique combination of diverse terrain. The UAE has a large arid land with vast sand deserts, but it is also known for its mountains, oases, sand dunes, valleys, mangroves, beaches, and salt plains
