Property Management, (revenuekey.com) a Florida based company, has developed a very comprehensive and reputable platform that caters to the diverse needs of property owners looking for exceptional rental income. They understand that property owners are looking for significant passive income while benefitting from a worry free experience. The founders of the company are from south Florida and have a great deal of expertise in real estate investments, valuations and management. They facilitate all types of leases, but their specialty is in short term vacation rentals, which has been documented to yield much more rental income than traditional tearsms. Some of their marketing partners include Airbnb, Booking.com, VRBO and Google.

"We had our own property and additionally had been advising friends and family of ways to yield the maximum income available without any hassle.. We noticed in every case, we were yielding more income for those we were advising than what they were achieving prior to our assisting them. We then developed a system to streamline the demands of their property management needs and a light went off in our heads. We realized that we could put these practices and experience to good use by developing a system that would help others benefit, both financially and in managing their property", said Andrew Zorn, one of the founders.

The RevenueKey brand is growing fast

Another founder of RevenueKey, Scott Rothschild, said "there are a few good companies out there that manage vacation rental properties. Some offer their services for as much as a 20% management fee. We're good at what we do and enjoy helping, so we thought a 10% management fee would allow property owners to use us cost effectively. Additionally, we felt that pricing rental properties accurately, which is incredibly important, could be optimized and therefore allow us to yield more for our clients. Proper pricing is much more than just using pricing tools; it comes with many factors including running tests specific to each property. We love managing property and creating the best available outcome for our clients."

RevenueKey is also well known for their attention to service. Their management fee includes the supervision of each property, which even includes housekeeping service. They understand that property owners want maximum income, but great service and proper oversight only add to a satisfying experience.
