Partnering with Sports Illustrated, GolfRank introduces an innovative, comprehensive ranking system, revolutionizing golf's competitive landscape.

GolfRank Launches World Golf Rankings, Uniting Pros and Amateurs Globally with a Unique Ranking System

Jim Stracka, CEO of GolfRank, expresses enthusiasm about the collaboration, stating, "GolfRank is thrilled to partner with Sports Illustrated to provide the World Golf Rankings for all golfers. With GolfRank's easy-to-understand algorithms, millions of golfers will now be able to see how they rank globally and at their home course!"

In contrast to conventional ranking systems, GolfRank is distinct in its approach. While existing ranking systems like OWGR (for professional men), WAGR (for amateurs), Clipd (for college golfers), and Rolex (for professional women) focus on specific segments, GolfRank's groundbreaking system transcends boundaries, encompassing golfers irrespective of skill level or venue, be it on a golf course or simulator.

GolfRank leverages its proprietary calculation methodology, emphasizing the Distance Per Shot (DPS) metric, to deliver a comprehensive ranking. DPS, a unique data point, evaluates golfers based on scores and distance information while accounting for dynamic course adjustments, ensuring fairness across varying course difficulties.

Leveraging Golf Intelligence's extensive repository of golf-related data and actual player results, GolfRank meticulously compiles information on thousands of courses to compute individual and course-specific DPS values. This data-driven approach ensures a fair and accurate representation of a player's performance, taking into account the nuances of each course.

To qualify for GolfRank's rankings, golfers must have 20 recent scores, with a maximum of 40 scores considered within the past year. The system evaluates the best 40% of these scores, ensuring a balanced and representative assessment of a player's proficiency.

A critical aspect of GolfRank's innovation lies in the dynamic course adjustment feature. Continuously updated with new data, this feature maintains the rankings' integrity by adapting to evolving course data, ensuring a nuanced assessment of course difficulties.

The introduction of the World Golf Rankings by GolfRank stands as a landmark moment in the golfing community, offering a universal ranking system accessible to golfers worldwide, redefining competitiveness and inclusivity in the sport.
