

Varied Adventures of a Chinese American Hero, a Police Chief in the Southwest, and a Court Painter in Old Beijing.

Growing Recognition for Via Media's Newest Fiction Books

SANTA FE, NM, UNITED STATES, January 18, 2024
/EINPresswire.com/ -- Via Media Publishing is proud to announce the release of a new line of fiction books written by the company's founder, Michael DeMarco. These books have been making a significant impact in the literary world, gaining recognition and popularity among readers. The titles include "Wuxia America: The Timely Emergence of a Chinese American Hero," "Martial Art Essays from Beijing, 1760," and the newest addition, "Crossfire Southwest: Life Behind a Badge."

Michael DeMarco, a renowned author and founder of Via Media Publishing, has once again captivated readers with his latest works. Each book is well-written, entertaining, and thoughtfully crafted, showcasing DeMarco's exceptional writing skills and unique storytelling abilities. The books offer a diverse range of genres, from action-packed adventures to insightful essays, making them a must-read for all book lovers.

With a plot spiced like a Chinese herbal recipe, "Wuxia America" is a powerful story of identity, culture, and heroism set in the backdrop of present-day intense intrigues unfolding on an international scale.

"Martial Art Essays from Beijing, 1760" takes readers on a journey through time, exploring the richness of Chinese martial traditions as found in handwritten papers found among a Jesuit court painter in the Forbidden City.

As the newest work, "Crossfire Southwest: Life Behind a Badge," presents some of the daily occurrences of a career policeman, from rookie cop to the position of chief in the American Southwest. His personal story illuminates aspects of law enforcement that will resonate in readers who value peace at home and on the streets. Warning: many of the stories are
