

Association of Cryptocurrency Journalists and Researchers (ACJR) Elects 2024 Officers and Board of Directors

The Association of Cryptocurrency Journalists and Researchers (ACJR) elects Molly Jane Zuckerman, opinion editor of Blockworks, to lead its 2024 board.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK, USA, January 23, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Association of Cryptocurrency Journalists and Researchers (ACJR) announced today the 2024 Officers and Board of Directors elected by the membership in its annual general election.

The officers are President - Molly Jane Zuckerman, opinion editor of Blockworks and a founder of ACJR; Vice President - Sam Reynolds, senior reporter at CoinDesk; and Treasurer - Mitchell Moos, consultant.

At-Large Board Members are Phil Gomes, CCMO, Bloq Inc.; Connor Sephton, freelance journalist; Pedro Solimano, writer of La Cadena; and Aaron Stanley, founder, Brazil Crypto Report and Editorial Director at Filecoin Foundation. All were elected to serve a one-year term.

“After three years on the ACJR board, I'm highly looking forward to my first year as president,” Zuckerman said. “The past year has brought us more crypto news than we knew what to do with, and I'm confident that the ACJR will continue to be a resource to highlight outstanding journalism and research, as well as guide cryptocurrency and blockchain coverage.”
