“More often than not, there’s a Picote Miller on a trenchless pipe repair jobsite,” Walter McMillan estimates. He’s the training manager for Apex CIPP. “Picote is known for their milling machines that can do anything from drain cleaning to grabbing items lodged inside pipes. The value is in their versatility and durability." The Millers are available in a range of sizes and power types, some having a rechargeable battery option.

In addition to the milling machines, Picote products include a full catalog of pipe repair and maintenance tools. Apex CIPP will service and repair the equipment from their Sarasota, FL headquarters. They promise fast turnaround since they know the importance of keeping plumbing jobs on schedule.

"Our Picote debut will be at The WWETT Show at The Indianapolis Convention Center January 25-27." The WWETT Show is the world's largest annual trade show for the wastewater industry, now valued at USD 295 billion. The show had over 12,000 participants in 2023. Apex will display Picote and other rehab equipment while showcasing digital and live product demonstrations.

"We're excited to see new and familiar faces at The WWETT Show," states Underwood. "We'll have demos of UV LED light curing and a hands-on station where attendees can try robotic pipe cutting."

The company ships nationwide from their online store apexcipp.com and also accepts phone orders. They offer expert consultations and free training at their headquarters. Underwood suggests that those considering new equipment or having questions about their existing machines give them a call or visit them in booth #6340 during the WWETT Show.
