Hosted by McMahon's Revenant cannabis brand, the event aims to send a strong message to the NFL and other sports organizations that fail to recognize the medical potential of cannabis. The 2024 charity tournament will feature various athletes including former 49ers quarterback Steve Young, as well as Calvin Johnson, Johnny Damon, Jonathan Ogden, Greg Maddux, Ricky Watters, Jake Plummer, Rollie Fingers, Grant Fuhr, Goose Gossage, Vince Coleman, Mark Rypien, and Ricky Williams.

"We can't wait to bring this event to Vegas after the success of last year's debut tournament in Arizona," said McMahon. "Along with golfing and mingling with celebrities and athletes, we'll be sending a message to the NFL about the power of cannabis as an alternative to opioids and other harmful prescription drugs."

McMahon's cannabis brand, Revenant, was founded by McMahon, Kyle Turley, and Eben Britton, all former athletes who have experienced profound benefits from the cannabis plant.

This year's tournament comes after a successful debut event in Arizona last year, which was named the Best Weed Infused Sporting Event of 2023 by Phoenix New Times.
