This is something that should have been done a long time ago and we thank the community for their patience.”

Jason Brink - President of Blockchain

Before its removal, the Honor System in Spider Tanks faced considerable criticism from the player community. Many players expressed dissatisfaction with the system, feeling that it detracted from the core gaming experience rather than enhancing it. The system, intended to promote positive behavior and contribute to the game's ecosystem, was often perceived as cumbersome and misaligned with player expectations. This sentiment was echoed across various community platforms, where players voiced their concerns about how the system impacted gameplay. The overwhelming feedback from the player base played a pivotal role in Gala Games' decision to ultimately remove the Honor System, demonstrating the company's commitment to listening to and addressing the concerns of its players.

The removal of the Honor System has streamlined the gaming experience, placing a renewed emphasis on skill and tactical gameplay. This development has been beneficial for both new and veteran players, offering a more engaging and straightforward approach to game strategy.

Although the Honor System has been removed from the distribution, certain graphical elements associated with this system remain in the game until Gamedia, the developer of Spider Tanks, elects to complete their removal.
