The new cleaning standards come as a response to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and the need for increased sanitation measures. With the rise of new variants and the potential for future outbreaks, the UK government has taken proactive steps to protect its citizens and prevent the spread of the virus. These standards will be applicable to all public spaces, including schools, hospitals, restaurants, and public transportation.

The new standards include guidelines for regular and thorough commercial cleaning, deep cleaning, builders cleaning and disinfection of high-touch surfaces, and the use of appropriate cleaning products. Additionally, businesses and organizations are required to have a designated cleaning and sanitation plan in place to ensure compliance with the standards. Failure to adhere to these standards may result in penalties and fines.

The UK government is committed to ensuring the health and safety of its citizens and believes that these new cleaning standards will play a crucial role in preventing the spread of COVID-19 and other infectious diseases. The implementation of these standards is a significant step towards creating a cleaner and safer environment for all. The government urges all businesses, organizations, and individuals to comply with the standards to protect themselves and their communities.

The new cleaning standards will be regularly reviewed and updated as needed to align with the latest scientific evidence and recommendations. The UK government encourages everyone to stay informed and follow the guidelines to help combat the spread of COVID-19. Together, we can create a cleaner and healthier UK for all.
