Growing up Nathan has always been drawn to multiple genres of music. The lush harmonies and soul of R&B alongside the bright catchiness of a Pop classic. That has allowed him to forge his own musical identity that's simultaneously familiar while containing an unheard of freshness. As part of a legacy, Nathan began working at his first funeral home the same year he won the Indie Charts Independent Artist of the Year Award. Meanwhile one of his early singles, "Closure" became an international hit! While experiencing musical success he still found time to become

CEO, expand the business to include 10 additional funeral homes and diversify by founding other companies.

When asked about how he's still able to find the balance between music and working in an industry where he's often, grief counselor, family mediator, and many other things. Nathan replied, "I've been doing a ton of personal growth. During Covid my mental health was shot. I turned to writing. I wrote songs about what I was watching night after night. Death. Loss. Grief. Sadness of others and myself. It was in these lonely moments I was able to get to the heartbeat of me."

For Nathan this year is already starting off with a bang! He's scheduled to begin shooting his own TV show this summer.
