Drawing deep inspiration from her mother, Lois Sanford Costello, Temperato crafts a narrative that is both engaging and educational. Lois, who now resides in a memory care unit at 90, may have her memories challenged by time and dementia, but the legacy of her wisdom and love for reading vibrantly lives on through her daughter's work. "The rhythm of my mother's voice reading to me as a child, the way she turned words into music, especially with rhyming stories, left a lasting impression," shares Temperato. "She believed, and taught me, that reading is the most powerful tool we have for learning and growing."
