hospitality, to support the company's digital transformation and edge computing initiatives. Acumera Reliant Platform will seamlessly integrate with Casey's legacy systems and accommodate modern application architectures, providing a core software foundation for unique retail, fuel, and hospitality application providers with specific operating requirements.

"Today's modern convenience, retail and hospitality brands operating at scale face significant challenges, with a requirement to deliver next-generation applications and experiences consistently across thousands of locations. With the Acumera Reliant Platform, legacy systems, container-based applications, and digital content are all delivered and managed at scale, along with fully integrated monitoring and observability," commented Phil Stead, VP of Sales at Acumera.

The Acumera Reliant platform is providing the opportunity to lower the total cost of ownership by hardware consolidation and extending Casey's overall front-end hardware lifecycle.

Mike Heine, Director Business Technology and Architecture for Casey's, shared "edge computing is a foundation for technology to scale with our business growth, creates efficiencies that make technology smart and convenient and leads to a friction-free experience for our Team members and Guests." This collaboration enables Casey's to take an agnostic approach to cloud hosting providers, physical edge hardware vendors, and third-party application vendors. Acumera's flexible and composable centralized cloud management has been extended to Casey's build partner, facilitating system staging at scale. By choosing the Acumera Reliant Platform, Casey's retains full control and flexibility, optimizing the selection of physical hardware vendors and compute to meet both near-term and strategic objectives.

"Casey's deployment of Acumera Reliant Platform is now the foundation for consistent operations and represents a singular approach to all next-generation system delivery across all new initiatives - all able to operate locally with high availability without WAN connectivity," stated Richard Newman, CRO at Acumera.
