The journey of success began with the launch of Table Grid Editor in 2012, which later advanced into the Table Grid Next Generation. This add-on enables users to view and edit data in a grid format, easily configurable through a simple dashboard.

With the introduction of Exalate, the integration solution, in 2015, the company has continuously demonstrated expertise in navigating the dynamic Atlassian marketplace ecosystem, culminating in its current Platinum recognition.

The Platinum status highlights key differentiators vital for users:

- Unmatched Training and Expertise: Demonstrates the highest Atlassian training criteria.
- Proven Scalability: Exalate scales seamlessly, catering to both small and large customers.
- Sales Goal Achievement and Security Excellence: Highlights reliability and commitment.
- Swift Support: Ensures a seamless experience for customers.

Exalate's strength in complex integration scenarios lies in its powerful scripting mode, offering unmatched flexibility and scalability tailored to each business's unique needs.

Looking towards tomorrow, Exalate embraces the future with AI-powered syncs on the horizon—leading the next generation of middleware and ensuring secure, efficient, scalable integration across systems, teams, and companies.

As Exalate celebrates this significant achievement, it reaffirms its commitment to providing tangible value to businesses globally. The Platinum status is a testament to Exalate's dedication to seamless collaboration, demonstrated through proven expertise, unmatched scalability, and a customer-first approach.

About Exalate: Headquartered in Antwerp, Belgium, Exalate is a leading provider of integration software, fostering teamwork, collaboration, and productivity across tools, teams, and company borders. Boasting a team of over 100 experts worldwide, a partner network of over 180 companies, and serving more than 2,500 international customers. <http://exalate.com>
