Held across two days, on January 26th and 27th, 2024, at Rutgers Cinema in New Jersey, the festival opened with film screenings, jury meetings, and panel discussions, culminating in the crescendo of festivities on January 27th. This evening was dedicated to honoring exceptional achievements in wedding filmography at The Chateau Grande Hotel in New Jersey.

This year's edition convened a diverse panel of experts, including filmmakers, musicians, and social media influencers, to grapple with the ever-evolving landscape of wedding filmography. The conversation, titled "Love, Lens, and Hustle: How Today's Wedding Filmmakers can win in Business" revolved around navigating a saturated market and making one's work stand out. Moderated by Indian National Award-winning wedding choreographer Amrita Maitra, the panel featured media industry luminaries such as documentary photographer Carey MacArthur, media strategist Sai Sagar Patnaik, wedding filmmaker Patrick Floricio, florist Syeda Leeah Ali, Gen Z YouTuber William Liu, and music director Vincent Di Mura. Their insights illuminated the evolving art of wedding filmmaking and the challenges of capturing unique and authentic stories.

A central theme emerged: the imperative of storytelling in wedding films. Patrick Floricio emphasized individualization, ensuring each couple's narrative takes center stage. Syeda Leeah Ali echoed this, highlighting the growing trend of couples breaking away from tradition to create weddings reflecting their unique personalities and love stories.

Sai Sagar Patnaik shifted the focus to the business side, stressing the importance of authenticity and creative ideation in securing clients and delivering exceptional films. Vincent Di Mura resonated with this sentiment, emphasizing the need for truthfulness in storytelling and staying connected to the essence of a couple's journey.

Budget considerations also entered the discussion. Carey MacArthur and Patrick Floricio shared their experiences navigating different market segments while staying true to their artistic vision. They emphasized finding one's niche and catering to the specific needs of one's target audience.

Despite the challenges, the panelists exuded passion for wedding filmmaking and the joy of capturing timeless moments for couples. They highlighted the importance of festivals like Clangrose in providing a platform to showcase their work, connect with peers, and inspire future generations.

Concluding the discussion, Amrita Maitara encapsulated the essence, emphasizing the need to balance artistic integrity with technological advancements. She underscored the importance of storytelling in creative fields like wedding photography and videography, where the challenge lies in harmonizing client expectations with personal artistic expression. the panelist' views on the evolving role of technology, particularly AI, which should complement human creativity rather than overshadow it. As the industry navigates rapid technological changes, the consensus is to leverage AI as a tool to enhance storytelling and streamline processes, while still preserving the unique artistic vision of each creative professional.

Cynthia Liu, the executive producer, summarized the festival's spirit: "Clangrose Wedding Film Festival celebrates the creativity, passion, and resilience of wedding filmmakers worldwide. It serves as a testament to the power of storytelling and the enduring significance of love captured on film. As the wedding industry continues to evolve, festivals like Clangrose will play a vital role in fostering community, creativity, and innovation in wedding filmmaking."

Further deepening the experience for participants, Clangrose incorporates thought-provoking panel discussions as a deliberate choice, which elevates the experience for wedding industry professionals, fostering dialogue and sparking inspiration. I, Carmelo Soberano, believe that our impact extends beyond a single festival. Clangrose serves as a catalyst for community building, fostering connections, and empowering filmmakers to navigate the evolving landscape of their craft.
