Recent Developments:

July 22, 2022: As countries and banks around the world start the process of getting back to normal operations, one thing that this terrible experience has shown us is that it is no longer needed, safe and viable to have large teams of people working closely together in the same office at the same location. The drive to digitization has become more vital and urgent, which should be lauded. We have been on the digitization journey for some years, and there are areas of the banks' operations which are now fully digitized; however, this journey, to a certain extent, has always stopped at the door of Trade Finance and specifically Trade Finance compliance. As we all know, Trade-based money laundering is one of the most common global laundering strategies; the banks need to address this growing industry problem on a priority basis with efficient solutions to mitigate the risks.

June 15, 2023: Electricity has dramatically changed the way we live. Our houses are filled with electrical appliances of various sorts, and we can't imagine a life without electronic devices too. But have you ever thought about how many watts your home is currently using on average? In fact, be it to eco-conscious homeowners or to budget-conscious homeowners, this question is of concern alike. Moreover, on the off chance that a power outage happens, it is crucial to know your total wattage consumption beforehand so that you can prepare in advance and avoid leaving yourself scratching your head to darkness. So without further ado, let's get down to business.
