As a graduate of the prestigious Musician's Institute in Hollywood, California, Max has consistently been at the forefront of the music industry, harnessing his expertise in guitar, recording engineering, and music production. These skills enabled him and his brother Harman Khosla to co-found Trailer Bros in 2009, a label that has since become synonymous with custom musical compositions for movie trailers and TV commercials.

Under Max's visionary leadership, Trailer Bros has created over 780 captivating campaigns that deeply resonate with audiences globally. Their work transcends mere music; it is a transformative experience that elevates advertising to the realm of high art. The campaigns for 'Fast X,' 'Black Panther,' and collaborations with NBC Universal are testament to their unparalleled contributions to the industry.

A recent project saw Max Khosla take on the role of executive and creative producer for the custom trailer music for Netflix's Tyler Perry's upcoming American legal thriller 'Mea Culpa.' Working under tight deadlines alongside his team of producers, Michael Elliott & Dave Carls, he crafted a sonic masterpiece in perfect harmony with the compelling storyline and cinematic vision of Tyler Perry. This project highlights Max's unique ability to enhance storytelling through music that not only complements the visuals but also enriches the entire narrative.

It is Max Khosla's meticulous attention to detail and his commitment to quality that set him apart. His work is not merely heard; it is experienced, leaving a profound impact on the audience and raising the standard for what trailer music can achieve.

Today, Max continues to inspire with his steadfast dedication to his craft. His journey from an aspiring musician to a master at the pinnacle of the cinematic music world is an inspiration to many. His passion, combined with his creative genius, ensures that the legacy of Trailer Bros is marked by lasting influence and continuous innovation in the film and TV advertising industry.
