corporate responsibility with direct environmental action, companies are invited to contribute towards planting trees in protected forests across the United States, thereby making a significant positive impact on our planet.

Employers have the opportunity to kickstart this journey by donating to plant one tree for each of their employees. This act serves not only as a contribution to global reforestation efforts but also as an inspiration for employees to engage in environmental conservation.

Employees are encouraged to play "Hawa the Game" where they can actively participate in planting the additional 19 trees needed to sequester their lifetime CO2 emissions. However, recognizing that gaming may not appeal to everyone, the initiative also welcomes direct contributions through the website www.hawathegame.com, where individuals can donate towards planting trees, thus offering an inclusive path for everyone to become an oxygen producer.

"This initiative is about making it easy and accessible for the entire workforce to contribute to a healthier planet, regardless of their interest in gaming" said Rahim, founder of Hawa LLC. By donating a tree for each employee, companies can set a powerful example of environmental stewardship. Additionally, we provide an alternative for those who prefer not to play the game but still wish to contribute to our reforestation efforts through direct donations on our website"

Highlighting the simplicity of the contribution, the cost of planting a single tree is $10 — approximately the equivalent of a high-end morning coffee. This comparison serves to illustrate how minor lifestyle adjustments, such as foregoing one cup of coffee per week, can have a profound impact on our environment. "It's a small sacrifice for a significant return: a healthier planet and a healthier lifestyle" Rahim emphasized.

The campaign is not only a testament to what can be achieved when corporate entities and individuals come together for a common cause but also a call to action for companies to lead by example in the global effort to combat climate change. By engaging their employees in this meaningful initiative, companies can foster a culture of sustainability and responsibility that extends beyond the workplace.

Employers and employees alike are invited to join this vital movement by visiting www.hawathegame.com Together, we can make a substantial difference in the fight against climate change, one tree, one donation, and one game at a time.
