Definition

The private military service market refers to the industry composed of private companies or firms that provide military-related services to governments, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), multinational corporations, or other entities. These services can range from combat operations and security to logistics, training, intelligence gathering, and advisory roles. Private military companies (PMCs) or private security companies (PSCs) often operate in conflict zones, post-conflict environments, or areas with high levels of political instability where traditional military or law enforcement agencies may be unable or unwilling to provide adequate security or support.
