The market is expected to grow at a notable pace over the next five to six years, owing to factors such as expanding organized retail sector including supermarkets and hypermarkets, changing food preferences of people, evolving lifestyles and increasing disposable incomes. Moreover, a plethora of new developments in small scale food and retail sector and inclination toward food safety concerns are expected to boost demand for RDCs in the future. Owing to emission of greenhouse gases such as CFCs and HFCs in existing RDCs, various changes are now being adopted with regards to compressor design, specifically in North America and Europe.

The global RDC market is expected to grow at an exponential rate due to wide scale adoption of RDCs in commercial sectors. Commercial developments in the retail food sector in the developing economies are likely to boost the adoption rate of refrigerated display cases. The refrigeration storage industry in Asia-Pacific and the Middle East have boomed rapidly, which is likely to fuel the growth of the global RDC market. RDC devices have been increasingly adopted in supermarkets and hypermarkets to ensure food storage and safety. RDCs find applications in biomedical industry for storage of flowers and at corner food retail shops to address the growing concerns of product safety and temperature maintenance.

The refrigerated display cases segmented on the basis of product type, product design and geography. The product type segment includes plug-in and remote RDCs. Plug-in RDCs dominate the overall market and are expected to maintain their dominance throughout the forecast period. The product design segment includes vertical, horizontal and hybrid/semi-vertical RDCs. Regional segmentation of the refrigerated display cases market includes North America, Europe, Asia-Pacific, and LAMEA (Latin America, the Middle East, & Africa).

By product design, the vertical design segment held a major share in the market. The segment is estimated to exhibit fastest growth during the forecast period. With widespread growth in small and medium sized retail outlets, demand for vertical RDCs has witnessed a substantial increase. Horizontal RDCs are expected to exhibit a notable growth trend during the forecast period, owing to their growing demand in organized large size retail food stores. Hybrid RDCs, which have dual temperature control system have been gaining adoption, especially with increase in demand from cafes and quick service restaurants.
