Scott Blais, Jr., Sales and Business Development Manager, North America, expressed his confidence in Jason, stating, "There was an immediate 'fit,' and it was evident that moving forward with Jason was a wise decision for both parties. Jason's wealth of experience, mechanical aptitude, and composure make him a valuable addition to mk, benefiting both him and his customers in the region. His sales leadership and management background position him as a significant asset in his territory, and we anticipate great successes as Jason embarks on his new role with mk."

When asked about his new position, Jason shared his enthusiasm, saying, "I am excited to represent mk North America as a high-quality, customer-focused, and flexible engineering resource for the automation and material handling industries in my local market. My experience in finding the right solutions for customer applications aligns seamlessly with the mk approach and can be a genuine asset to machine builders in their conveying designs."

Jason joins a dynamic team of over six Regional Sales Managers, including Jeff Billig, who will continue covering southeastern New York and eastern Pennsylvania. mk North America looks forward to the positive impact Jason will undoubtedly bring to the team as he assumes his responsibilities in this new role.
