Lonesome Day Records’ label head Randall Deaton (Larry Cordle, Ralph Stanley II, Randy Kohrs) produced and co-engineered “Ramblin’ Gamblin’ Man” with Grammy award-winner Gary Nichols (The SteelDrivers), and Jimmy Nutt (Jason Isbell, Drive By Truckers, Kate Campbell). The track was recorded at Lonesome Day Recording Studio, Booneville, KY and The NuttHouse Recording Studio, Muscle Shoals, AL. Musicians include A-listers Stephen Mouglin (Guitar), Darrell Webb (Mandolin), Ned Luberecki (Banjo), Mike Bub (Bass) and Wayne Bridge (Dobro). Background vocals were handled by Gary Nichols and Cindy Walker.

“I asked Gary to recommend an artist for this song,” Deaton recalls. “He and Bo had played the bar scene together in Muscle Shoals and Gary had nothing but good things to say about him.” Nichols recalls, “I was always a fan of Bo’s. His devotion to ‘selling a song’ as a vocalist is unmatched. I knew he would be perfect,” Nichols adds. “And he delivered big time.”

Seeger released "Ramblin' Gamblin' Man" in 1968 and the song would become the first of his many hits. For Bice to interpret this classic was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. "As soon as Gary mentioned this project to me, I knew I was on board," Bo recalls. "Seeger had an influence on my vocal and performance style for sure. As entertainers we take pieces from our favorite artists and meld them into our stage persona. I'd be proud to think there's a little bit of Seeger in me."

ABOUT BO BICE

This renowned modern-day Southern Rock singer has already left an indelible mark on the music industry. He entered the musical arena with an epic foray on American Idol as runner-up to Carrie Underwood in 2005. He mesmerized the show's audience with his powerful, soulful vocals and high-energy performances.

With a career spanning over 25 years, Bo has achieved numerous accolades, including induction into the Alabama Music Hall of Fame. His music has earned him three Gold albums, and he has circled the globe several times, including as frontman for the legendary Rock/Jazz/Horn group Blood, Sweat and Tears. He has also taken his career to a deeper level and partnered with philanthropic groups, including "Feed the Children," NASCAR, MusiCares, and the Helena Miracle League.

This Bluegrass interpretation of Ramblin' Gamblin' Man is just wonderful – with the sexy, smokey lyrics carried over frenzied guitar and mandolin and whirls of the banjo. "
