About the Author

The Author Monsignor Paul L. Bochicchio

Monsignor Paul L. Bochicchio, a native of New York City and a longtime resident of New Jersey, has dedicated his life to serving others and guiding souls on their spiritual journey. Ordained as a priest for the Archdiocese of Newark, NJ on May 29th, 1971, Monsignor Paul's illustrious career spans over five decades, marked by a deep commitment to ministry and a passion for teaching and spiritual direction.

From his early days as a parish priest to his tenure as a pastor, Monsignor Paul has served in a variety of roles within the Catholic Church, including as a campus minister, teacher at elementary, high school, university, and seminary levels, vocation director, and personnel director. He has also served as a chaplain to a group of people with disabilities, offering comfort and spiritual support to those in need.

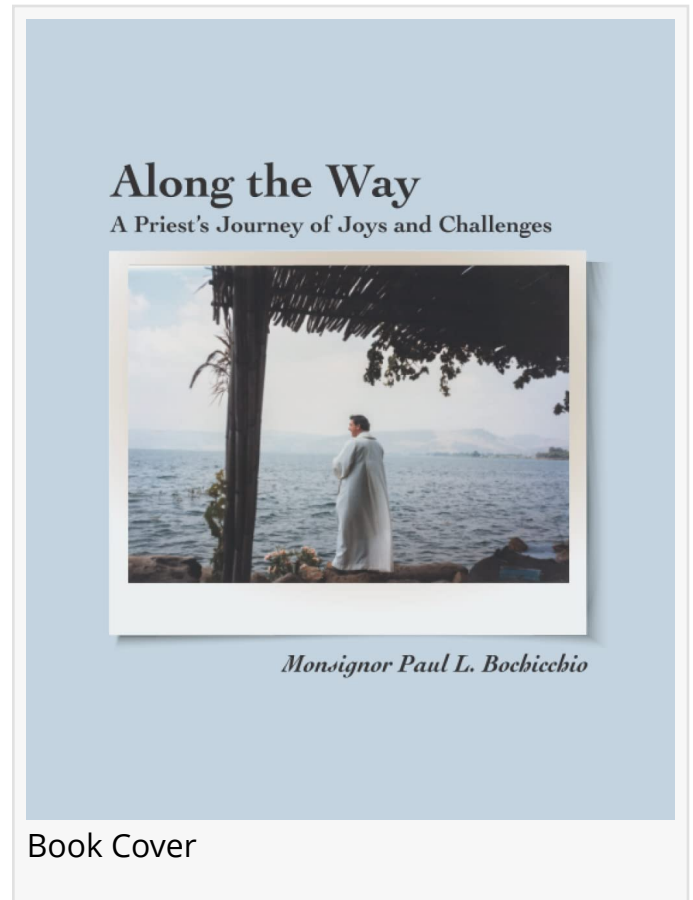

In addition to his pastoral duties, Monsignor Paul is a gifted spiritual director, guiding individuals on their journey of faith and providing insight and wisdom gleaned from his years of experience. He is also a sought-after speaker and retreat leader, having given numerous parish missions and retreats to audiences ranging from youth and adults to religious and priests.

The motivation for writing this book centered around his desire to “release David from the marble” as Michelangelo did. It was driven by the belief that these stories hold valuable insights, lessons, and inspiration for others. By sharing them, Monsignor Paul hoped to encourage a culture of openness and storytelling, where individuals feel empowered to share their own experiences and perspectives.

While his focus was on the specific context of Seminarians and priests, the overarching message of self-expression, resilience, and the power of storytelling transcends boundaries and resonates with people from all walks of life. Ultimately, his goal was to foster a sense of connection and understanding among readers, regardless of their background or beliefs.

In addition to radio interviews, video interviews, and podcasts, you can explore a variety of engaging content on Monsignor Paul's website, paulbochicchiothebook.net, designed to provide deeper insights into the themes and stories featured in his book.
