"We've experienced more than 40 percent growth since 2019, and with that came the need for our office to better assist the work we do across legal research, data analytics, information management, and digital storytelling, said Beth Master, CEO and President of HAI. "As we look forward to 45 years in business, this new space allows us to better receive, work with and store sensitive and fragile documents; collaborate with one another and our partners; and ensure that we have the room to continue supporting our legal, government, aerospace, museum, insurance, and industrial clients – just to name a few."

The interior of the new office was designed by Arlington-based FORM Architects, led by MinJae Chong and Kirstyn Nocho. Together they created a supportive design specific to the unique needs of a company that often deals with sensitive historical documentation. Korth Construction based in Gaithersburg, Maryland handled the renovation and build out, led by project manager, Sam Gurowitz. Adam Singer and Laurent Myers of Savills led the work to find a new space and handled lease negotiations.

As we look forward to 45 years in business, this new space allows us to better collaborate with one another and our partners, while also ensuring we have the room to continue supporting our clients."
