Amidst the Internal Revenue Service's (IRS) latest crackdown on 125,000 high-income individuals who have not filed their tax returns, Fortress Tax Relief has announced a significant expansion of its services tailored to support those affected by the 2024 initiative. Utilizing advanced AI technology and an influx of new personnel, the IRS has enhanced its ability to pinpoint taxpayers who have not met their filing obligations, marking a substantial push towards addressing tax noncompliance among wealthy Americans.

Fortress Tax Relief is proactively responding to this development by bolstering its team and resources, anticipating an increased need for specialized tax resolution services. This initiative comes in the wake of the IRS's decision to resume the issuance of automated collection notices for the first time since 2022, a move facilitated by technological advancements and recent expansions within the agency.

Stephen K. Galgoczy, Esq., president of Fortress Tax Relief, underscores the importance of understanding available options for those receiving IRS correspondence. "The prospect of dealing with the IRS can be intimidating, particularly under these circumstances," Galgoczy states; "However, our clients can rest assured that there are viable strategies to address back taxes and negotiate favorable tax settlements. Our team of tax relief attorneys is ready to guide you through the process to secure the best possible outcome."
