Definition:

The finance lease market refers to the sector of the financial industry where finance leasing transactions take place. A finance lease is a type of leasing arrangement where a lessee (usually a business) obtains the right to use an asset from a lessor (financial institution or leasing company) for a specified period, paying regular lease payments over the lease term. Unlike an operating lease, a finance lease often transfers the risks and rewards of ownership to the lessee and may include a purchase option at the end of the lease term.
