

New Protective Cover Forms Barrier Between Gas Pump Handles and Hands to Prevent Spread of Germs and Bacteria

MONROEVILLE, PA, USA, March 11, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Freda P. of Brookhaven, GA is the creator of the Personal Gas Handler, a flexible plastic cover for gas pumps designed to prevent direct skin contact with the pump. Users can attach the cover over the gas pump handle and trigger, allowing the user to grasp a sanitary surface rather than risk contracting germs and bacteria from the pump. Users can sanitize and reuse the cover as needed, effectively improving personal safety and preventing the spread of illness.

The market for products related to hygiene and cleanliness has gained increased attention, especially in the context of public spaces. Reusable and disposable gas pump handle covers appeal to individuals who are concerned about touching surfaces that may have been touched by many others. While disposable products may address hygiene concerns, there is also an increasing awareness of environmental sustainability; therefore, some consumers prefer reusable options to minimize waste. Improving sanitary conditions in public spaces will ultimately lead to illness prevention, and products like the Personal Gas Handler could make a significant impact in the right manufacturing market.

Freda filed her Utility Patent with the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) and is working closely with InventionHome, a leading invention licensing firm, to sell or license the patent rights to her Personal Gas Handler product. Ideal licensing candidates would be U.S. based product manufacturers or distributors looking to further develop and distribute this product innovation.
