36 Days of Type 2023: Celebrating Creativity and Design Community

In an extensive interview, You Zhang sheds light on the significance of the "36 Days of Type 2023" project, which is a celebration of the symbiotic relationship between design and the community. This initiative, which originated as a personal challenge between two Barcelona-based graphic designers, Nina Sans and Rafa Goicoechea, has now evolved into an international movement, engaging designers from diverse backgrounds worldwide.

The project serves as a creative marathon, pushing artists to explore new techniques, experiment with their creativity, and maintain consistency. While typography and design are central to the challenge, artists incorporate elements of illustration, animation, 3D modeling, and augmented reality, reflecting the ever-evolving nature of design.

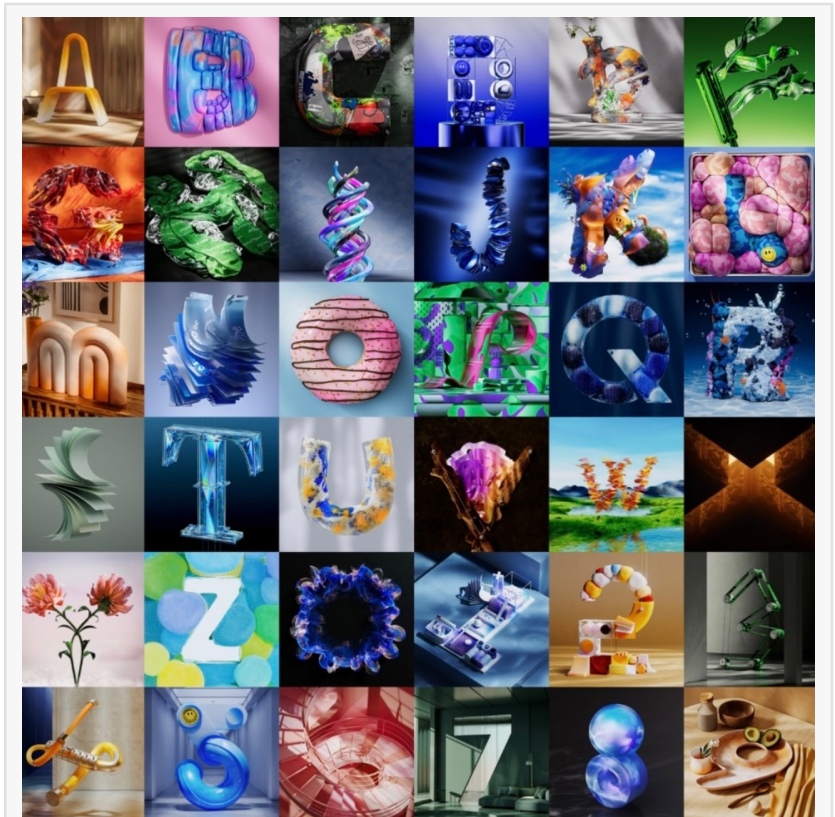

One of the most enriching aspects of the 36 Days of Type challenge is the sense of community it fosters. Designers not only share their creations but also offer feedback, appreciation, and even collaborate on entries. It acts as a bridge, connecting artists who might never have crossed paths otherwise.

The curated selection showcased on the official 36 Days of Type Instagram, provides emerging talents with a significant platform for recognition, potentially opening doors to new opportunities and collaborations.

The 2023 edition of the challenge promises to be an exciting showcase of creativity, with artists pushing boundaries and experimenting with digital art platforms and tools.

A Journey of Personal Growth and Exploration

You Zhang's participation in the 36 Days of Type 2023 is more than just a commitment to art; it's a commitment to growth, exploration, and the enduring spirit of creativity within him. His journey as a Computer Graphics (CG) artist began as a self-motivated passion, driving him to create 3D renders daily.

The constraints inherent in projects like the 36 Days of Type serve as a challenge that pushes You Zhang beyond his comfort zone. It encourages him to innovate and consistently deliver, not just in terms of artistry but also efficiency in execution.

You Zhang's work for the project is a kaleidoscope of creativity, showcasing his ability to think beyond conventions and redefine the possibilities of typography. Beyond creativity, it also highlights his technical mastery, storytelling skills, adaptability, resilience, and meticulous attention to detail.

The project serves as a mirror reflecting his growth as an artist, his evolving perspectives, and his expanding skill set. It's a journey of 36 days, but the learnings and evolutions span far beyond.

Quote from Thanos Kagkalos, Motion Design Director from Athens, Greece: "Doing 36 days of type has always been quite challenging both in terms of quality and quantity work. You Zhang did a great job here blending many techniques/looks to create unique visuals and typefaces that can be applicable to many types of projects. Great job!"

You Zhang's journey through the 36 Days of Type 2023 project is a testament to his dedication, creativity, and the limitless possibilities of design. His work continues to inspire and captivate the creative community.
