Asia Pacific led the global market. Consequently, as well as disruptions in global supply chain networks, the industrial and automotive industries were significantly impacted, with the majority of production plants and industries shutting down. The increase can be ascribed to the product's increasing use in plastic and food additive applications. Adipic acid demand was lowered in the market due to a drop in worldwide car sales. On the other hand, the pandemic has created prospects for the market because of the increased demand for personal care and pharmaceutical products.
