

Fighting Child Exploitation: Kanopy Brings Acclaimed Documentary to Public and Academic Libraries

LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, April 15, 2024

/EINPresswire.com/ -- In a significant move towards addressing the critical issue of child trafficking, Kanopy, a top-tier educational streaming platform for public and academic libraries, has acquired the award-winning documentary "California's Forgotten Children." Produced by Emmy Award-winning filmmaker Melody C. Miller, the documentary has garnered acclaim for its powerful portrayal of survivors, activists, and law enforcement in the relentless battle against commercial sexual exploitation.

Within the first week of its release, "California's Forgotten Children" swiftly rose to become one of the top-five most-watched films on New Day Films, an esteemed distributor of social issue films with over 50 years of dedicated service.

This compelling documentary, now available on Kanopy, is a "MUST WATCH" for audiences interested in understanding and contributing to the fight against child trafficking. Public and academic libraries affiliated with Kanopy are offering free access to this impactful film, encouraging viewers to visit their local libraries and universities for a powerful cinematic experience that delves into the triumphs of survivors and the unwavering commitment to justice.

The documentary has received the prestigious Editors Choice from the Video Librarian, with the following commendation by K.J. Genuardo:
