..all material elements of the story about Dr. Joseph are false. We deeply regret having printed it, apologize to Dr. Joseph, and retract every statement and allegation made in that article.”

The lawsuit was filed after Potnetwork published a report on their website that stated that there never was a patent filed for the Kriya® Hops plant. It also claimed that Dr. Bomi Joseph lied about his invention and his identity. It caused significant damage to the reputation and credibility of Kriya® Hops derived Cannabidiol (CBD). When the report was proven to be inaccurate, Potnetwork Holdings retracted the false report from their website and replaced it with a public apology to Dr. Bomi Joseph.

After years of legal proceedings, Judge Stephanie Bowick of the Superior Court of California- Los Angeles County, signed a "Stipulation And Order Regarding Falsity Of Publication" on behalf of Dr. Bomi Joseph. In a confidential settlement, Potnetwork has also paid a settlement amount to Dr. Bomi Joseph for the damages caused by the false publication. This resolution marks the successful conclusion

On February 25th 2020, the United States Patent and Trademark Office issued US Patent# US PP31,477 for the Kriya® Hops plant. The patent describes the inflorescence of the plant having 145 mg/g of Cannabidiol (CBD). The patent names the inventor as Bomi Joseph.

Potnetwork blamed the investigative report on a "free lance reporter". In a statement regarding the offending article, Potnetwork stated "We have been unable to verify the author's allegations, leading us to conclude that all material elements of the story about Dr. Joseph and his business operations are false. We deeply regret having printed it, apologize to Dr, Joseph, and retract every statement and allegation made in that article."

"They defamed a viable solution that competed with cannabis derived CBD," said Justin Sullivan of Sullivan Law. "Kriya® Hops based products continue to grow worldwide, while Potnetwork has ceased to exist as an entity. This is a cautionary tale for entities that continue to propagate the Potnetwork falsehoods. Especially now that a judge has ruled that they are all false."
