

Used Electronics Find New Life via New York State's Electronics Recycling

Residents of the State of New York Must Recycle Certain Electronic Devices

NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, May 1, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In the state of New York, as many residents begin their spring cleaning, it's important to remember that discarding TVs, computer monitors, and other electronic devices in household garbage is illegal. Recycling old electronic equipment is an important way to help conserve precious resources and keep electronics out of landfills.

Reverse Logistics Group (RLG) offers hundreds of electronics collection sites in the state of New York, making it simple for consumers to recycle old televisions, printers, monitors, and more. A full list of RLG's New York collection sites is available at Reverse Logistics Group. The free collection sites are open to households, as well as small non-profits, businesses, and schools.

Commonly recyclable electronic devices include:

- Desktop and laptop computers
- Desktop printers
- Gaming consoles
- E-readers
- Small-scale servers
- Portable digital music players that are battery powered
- Mice
- Keyboards
- Computer speakers
