

Mandarino Chiropractic Underscores Effectiveness of Radial Pressure Wave Therapy

Dr. Frank J. Mandarino, an award-winning chiropractor, offers a wide variety of non-invasive therapies to address chronic pain and inflammation

STATEN ISLAND, NY, USA, March 20, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dr. Frank J. Mandarino, an award-winning chiropractor with offices in New York and New Jersey, is shedding light on the benefits of Radial Pressure Wave Therapy (RPW), one of many treatment options available in his practice, Mandarino Chiropractic.

As described on MandarinoChiropractic.com, RPW is a non-invasive treatment that helps in tissue healing as it addresses chronic pain and inflammation. It is a form of shockwave therapy that stimulates the body's natural healing process by sending high-energy acoustic waves into the specific target areas.

At the Mandarino Chiropractic location in Staten Island, N.Y., for example, RPW treatment is performed using equipment from Chattanooga, a major manufacturer of rehabilitation equipment for treating musculoskeletal, neurological, and soft tissue disorders.

The practice utilizes the "Intellect RPW 2" device to treat pain and inflammation in orthopedic conditions; the therapy is designed to activate connective tissue from the surface level to difficult-to-reach pathologies.

"I am astonished how the benefits of today's multifaceted treatments have revolutionized care.

Dr. Frank J. Mandarino, whose chiropractic practice includes locations in New York and New Jersey, is an expert in the field of soft tissue and myofascial involvement.

It's such an inspiration to see patients enjoy a better quality of life from our many effective protocols," states Dr. Mandarino.

Dr. Michael Carducci, a Mandarino Chiropractic partner, describes the favorable influence of RPW upon patient care as "really good for soft-tissue injuries, recovery, and all-around health. ... "It uses a stylus to basically break up scar tissue and increase blood flow to an area of complaint, which helps you heal more quickly."
