Applications Now Open for FMWC Training Academy's Telecommunication Training Program

Fathers and Mothers Who Care (FMWC) is excited to announce that applications are now being accepted for upcoming classes in the Telecommunication Training Program at the FMWC Training Academy. This program is designed explicitly for hard-to-employ individuals, including those who are justice-impacted, homeless, Transition Age Youth (TAY), foster youth, or individuals looking to make a career change.

The Telecommunication Training Program offered by FMWC equips participants with the skills and knowledge needed for successful careers in the telecommunications industry. The program provides comprehensive training in telecommunications technology, customer service, problem-solving, and professional development.

One of the unique aspects of this program is the expertise of its leaders, who collectively have over 100 years of combined experience in the telecommunications and training industries. Participants will benefit from their wealth of knowledge and practical insights, ensuring they receive high-quality training and preparation for their future careers.

"We are committed to providing opportunities for individuals who face barriers to employment," said Anthony Jenkins, Sr. Instructor at FMWC. "Our Telecommunication Training Program is designed to empower participants with the skills, confidence, and resources they need to succeed in telecommunications."

The program is open to individuals of all backgrounds and experiences. Applicants must be motivated to learn and committed to building a successful career in the telecommunications industry. Financial assistance and support services may be available for eligible participants.

To apply for the upcoming classes or to learn more about the Telecommunication Training Program, interested individuals can visit www.fmwc.org or contact Z. Scott directly at (323) 247-7667 or training@fmwc.org.
