The event served as a pivotal platform for meaningful dialogues aimed at exploring strategies to execute the outlined recommendations. With a keen focus on fostering collaboration and driving tangible progress within various sectors of national importance, attendees engaged in constructive exchanges aimed at advancing these initiatives.

The 21st Century Council is a coalition united by a common goal to promote inclusivity in policy development, with members convening throughout the year in diverse locations across the country. These quarterly gatherings serve as platforms for robust discussions and brainstorming sessions, where the varied perspectives of members are thoughtfully considered.

“Our council's expertise and dedication to addressing critical national issues have culminated in this document that reflects our commitment to making a positive impact on the future of our country. I am confident that the recommendations outlined in this report will be instrumental in shaping policies that benefit all Americans, and that our collective efforts hold the key to shaping a brighter and more equitable future for the country.” said CBCI’s executive director, Vanessa Griddine-Jones.

The report’s inclusive methodology includes rigorous examination to ensure maximized potential change occurs. The resulting annual report is made readily available for review by both Congress and the Executive Branch, underscoring the council’s commitment to transparency and accountability.

ABOUT CBCI

With an ever-changing representative form of democracy, we stand ready to prepare the next generation of political leaders. The Congressional Black Caucus Political Education and Leadership Institute (“CBC Institute”) was incorporated in 2000, as a 501 (c) (4), nonprofit, nonpartisan, social welfare organization. While our primary mission is to “Educate today’s voters and train tomorrow’s leaders,” we also inform, inspire and ignite our communities into action on issues that affect them the most.
