As a child, I remember the warmth and joy I felt while being read to. It taught me the value of reading." Karalynne Temperato Karalynne Temperato crafts this narrative with a deepseated belief in the foundational role of family. She shares, "Family is the best foundation to build a successful future. It is family that really matters and stays with us throughout our journey." Her story extends an invitation to readers to explore the essence of these bonds and the guiding light they provide.

Recalling her own childhood, Temperato reflects on the profound impact of being read to, emphasizing the lasting joy and value of shared reading moments. "As a child, I remember the warmth and joy I felt while being read to. It taught me the value of reading." Through "Four Frogs Sitting on a Log," she aspires to pass on this simple yet powerful gift, encouraging families to cherish their time together with a book in hand.

Temperato's journey as an author is rooted in a moment of realization about the empowering nature of literacy. A trip to the laundromat as a young adult became a pivotal experience, teaching her that with the ability to read, she could navigate the challenges of life independently.
