In response to the pandemic's uncertainties, the sanctuary temporarily suspended its volunteer program to prioritize its resident elephants' and volunteers' safety and well-being. The elephant sanctuary is poised to resume its volunteer activities. "We are overjoyed to announce the resumption of Elephant Freedom Project's volunteer program," declares Siriporn Tanaseth, the sanctuary's visionary founder. Our elephants have dearly missed the companionship and nurturing provided by our volunteers, and we are excited to welcome them back to continue our vital mission of providing a sanctuary rooted in compassion and respect for these magnificent beings."

Situated only an hour from Chiang Mai, Elephant Freedom Project's elephant nature park offers volunteers a unique opportunity to immerse themselves in Thailand's natural splendor while contributing meaningfully to the welfare of rescued elephants.

Tucked off the grid, the elephant sanctuary provides a tranquil and harmonious environment conducive to fostering the well-being of elephants and volunteers alike. Those interested in joining the volunteer program are encouraged to contact us for further details.

We are deeply grateful for the overwhelmingly positive feedback from our guests, which serves as a source of inspiration as we continue to champion responsible tourism and elephant conservation."
