From geographical expansion and undertaking international projects, to finding scarce talent, companies across the globe are increasingly looking outside their home country to find, hire, relocate and/or retain employees. This is not an easy fit considering the cultural, legal, and language barriers they must overcome.

Leveraging our decade-long experience, HR teams rely on LMW to successfully manage employees across language barriers, ensure compliance with local jurisdictions, and navigate cultural norms.”

LMW’s offerings in the Czech Republic and in Portugal include Employer of Record (EOR), Recruitment and HR consultancy (HRC), enabling organisations from around the world to seamlessly scale HR operations, with confidence and compliance.

According to Christina Vantola, Founder and Managing Director at LMW, an increasing number of companies are hiring remote global talent to grow their business and reduce costs. However, this expansion comes with increased complexity for HR departments. “Leveraging our decade-long experience, HR teams rely on LMW to successfully manage employees across language barriers, ensure compliance with local jurisdictions, and navigate cultural norms.”

Ales Sobotka, Sales Director and Country Manager at LMW commented, "Both Portugal and the Czech Republic offer a talented workforce with strong technical skills and work ethic. In fact, according to Eurostat they rank in the top 10 countries in Europe in terms of digital literacy among highly educated individuals. This, combined with the cultural richness, good work-life balance, and competitive salaries, makes these countries an attractive option for organisations looking to expand their global footprint."

Today, LMW looks after over 2000 employees in Greece, Cyprus, Malta, Czech Republic, and Portugal. Since its launch in 2013 the company has enjoyed double-digit growth, building a strong reputation for being a reliable, knowledgeable, and personable HR consultancy.
